Texts Show Nixon Indecisive On Problems of Watergate

-The Nixon Watergate papers portray in reolarkable detail an embattled President trying since early last year to keep details of the case from reaching the public-but uncertain about just how to do it.

The 1,308 pages, more than 200,000 words of the edited transcripts of secretly recorded con-versations about Watergate, were released bere yesterday. As the President said in his speech Monday night, they are laden with ambiguitles and emborrossments, placed by treharacterization deieted" or "expletive omitted".

Among the highlights was the transcript of a 103-minute meeting between the President and former White House counsel John Dean 3d on March 21, 1973. Durcases. The transcript reveals that Mr. Nixon, on his own initiative, dis-demands on at least half a dozen occasions during the meeting. without once suggesting that paying the men for their silence would be wroog.

Instead, the transcript reveals, Mr. Nixon repeatedly discussed different methods by which as much as $1 million could be paid to the hurgiars without the payments being traced to the White House. The purpose of such pay-ments, in the President's own words, would be "to keep the cap on the bottle," to "buy time."

"דישושנום זו, נשבסושים" "How moch money do you need?" the President asked Dean early in the March 21 conversation, according to the transcript. "I would say these people are going to cost a million dollars replied.

"We could get that," the President continued. "On the money, if you need the money you could get that. You could get a million dollars. You could get it in cash. I know where it could be gotten, It is not easy, but it could be done. But the question is who the hell would handle it? Any ideas on that?"

Mr. Nixon has said repeatedly that he first learned of the Watergate cover-up and hush money payments at the March 21, 1973, meeting and immediately took steps to end rather than prolong the cover-up. Throughout the conversation as recorded, however, the President returned repeatedly to the joint theme of avoiding "criminal liability" to members of the White House staff at all costs; the desirability of meeting the blackmail demands immediately. and the necessity of expediting another meeting at which his top aides—Dean, John Mitchell, John Earlichman and H. R. Haldeman -could get a decision on it."

Conspiracy Indictment Within 13 hours of the Oval Office discussion, Watergate conspirator Howard Hunt jr. received $75,000 in cash—a key element in the conspiracy-toobstruct-justice indicument returned against seven of the President's men this past March 1. What transpired at the March 21, 1973, meeting of Dean, the President and Mr. Haldeman is considered crucial by both Mr. Nixon and his critics to answering questions of whether Mr. Nixon himself was a participant in the alleged conspiracy.

The White House-released tran-script of the March 21 meeting reveals that the President coosidered the following basic options for dealing with a deteriorating situation described by Dean as a "growing cancer" on the oresidency:

 Granting executive clemeucy to Howard Hunt-You can't do it politically until after the '74 elections, that's for sure," Nr. Nixon told Dean, When Dean suggested that "it may further involve you in a way you should not be involved in this," the President replied: "No-it is wrong, that's for sure."

The President has used that statement in his defense, though the edited transcript indicates that the statement was made io reference to the political ramifications of the 1974 elections, rather than moral or legal "grong."

Some saw a parallel Lenin's return to the Finland tion in Leningrad in 1917, and share power in the projected provisional government. But the final decision will be that of Gen. to assume its responsibilities in the present political functure." the white - haired secretary - general

From the airport, Mr. Cunhal. flanked by armored vehicles and a noisy motorcade, rode triumphantly into the city, where he paid a call on Gen. Spinola.

The 59-year-old Communist had been in prison in Portugal for 11 years before escaping in 1963 and making his way first to Moscow and then to Prague, where he spent most of his years of exile. He followed by two days the return here, after a five-year exile in Paris, of Mario Soares, the secretary-general of the Socialist party. Mr. Soares, at the head of a Socialist delegation, went to greet his principal rival at the sirport. The aim of both parties is to maintain unity in a popular front with the help of Christian Democrats. This goal was reflected in the repeated chant of the crowd: "A united people will never be ranquished."

Return of Exiles

Since Sunday, when the airport was reopened, planes from other points in Europe have been jammed with returning exiles. Trains have brought in others. The prisons have been emptied of political prisoners.

The left has come into conflict with Gen. Spinols and the junta on an essential point, the way to end the African war, whose seeming hopelessness was a prime factor in triggering the army

May Day Rites

Today, hundreds of thousands of Portuguese workers celebrated May Day noisily but without violence. In Lisbon, the police estimated that more than 200.000 persons marched in a three-milelong procession through the capital's working-class districts to a stadium near the airport. There, they heard speeches hy Mr. Cunhal, Mr. Scares and other leftist and labor leaders. Mr. Cunhal, in a hoarse and rasping voice, told them that "by next May we want a democratic regime and an end to the war in Africa. We need an alliance of popular forces with the armed forces."

Discussed Secretly

The Italian import curb was secretly discussed at the meeting of a ministers' committee here last week and approved by the full cabinet last night.

Uoder the new regulations, importers must deposit 50 percent of the value of the goods they want to bring into the country into a non-interest-bearing account with the Bank of Italy. The measure automatically restricts imports because of the lack of cash in many import husies. The sums that are frozen by the Bank of Italy can be collected again only after six months. The new measure does not apply to raw materials or capital-investment goods, such as machinery for industrial plants.

Italian government sources explained that forceful measures were necessary to reduce the country's foreign-trade gap. The difference between Italy's imports and exports lest year was more than 3.150 billion lire ($5 hillion). and the treed of the first four months of the current year is even more unfavorable.

Secretary of State Henry Kishager arrived here last night and international levels," Mr. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived here last night and Immediately conferred with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt as part of an effort to build a broad base of support for a compromise troop-separation agree-ment between Israel and Syria. The mood for the meeting, held at a time of rapidly improving Egyptian - American friendship, was symbolized by Mr. Sadat, who told the new Mrs. Kissinger that "you're among Henry's family."

After discussing the Middle East situation, including Mr. Kissinger's ideas for bringing about an Israeli-Syrian disengagement when he begins ehut-tling between Jerusalem and Damascus later this week, Mr. Sadat and Mr. Kissinger had a private dinner with their wives at the government villa cast of this an-elect elty on the Mediterranean. Mr. Kissinger and his wife spent this morning sightseeing at the Roman amplitheater and baths and later at the Greco-Roman museum here. In a May Day speech, Mr. Sadat defended his policy of dis-engagement with Israel and rapprochement with the United States, He reiterated that the United States had changed its policy "from complete disregard of Arab threats to a sense of the dangers latent in the situation and a serious effort to find a solution.

Laos Coalition Will Accept Aid

VIENTIANE, Laos, May 1 (NYT).—In its first major action since assuming national power three weeks ago, the coalition government of Laos agreed yesterdsy to accept continuing financial ald from non-Communist countries to bolster the chronically weak economy.

The government's decision to accept the aid-about $30 million from the United States, France, Britain, Australia and Japanprovided the first concrete evidence that the Communist-led Pathet Lao faction of the new coalition intends to put political and ideological arguments aside In order to get vitally needed as-sistance from abroad.

He also said he may take up with Mr. Kissinger the possibility of U.S. arms supplies for Egypt. He said the subject had not been disria "bas the final word" with Mr. Kissinger about a Syrian-Israeli troop separation. Explaining his role, the Egyptian leader said: "We are discussing all the possibilities." Earlier yesterday, Mr. Kissinger wound up talks with President Houari Boumedienne of Algeria. As he was leaving Algiers yes-terday afternoon, Mr. Kissinger said that he had "increased hope" for the success of the disengagement talks as the result of what he called the "understanding and support" given him by Mr. Boumedienne. Aboard the Air Force 707 jet flight between Algeria, and Egypt, a senior U.S. official said that the talks with Mr. Boumedienne had the same goal as those held Monday in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrel Gromyko and those with Mr. Sadat to gain support from leaders and governments that have influence with Syria for a compromise disengagement ac-cord which would fall short of the demands made up to now by Syria. Mr. Kissinger in return has emphasized that he expects the Israelis, whom he will visit tomorrow, to make some concessions as well. He will go to Damascus on Friday. U.S. officials bave said that Israel and Syria have reject-ed the plans submitted by each other and therefore a middle ground must be found.

Meanwhile, it was announced that Mr. Kissinger would make an unscheduled return visit to Egypt on Saturday after taking Israel's proposals to Syria, and then would fly the same day to Am-military value, but three hills to the west were useful for defensive purposes. But he said the decision was more a political question than a military one.

This correspondent recently spent 10 days with the rebels in Guinea-Bissau. While the trip took place before the coup in Lisbon that brought Gen. It centered on his proposal for a federation of the African colonies with Portugal as set forth in his book, "Portugal and the Future."

The inescapable conclusion was that the rebels regard Gen. Spinola as potentially a more difficult enemy than the preceding regime led by Premier Marcello Africans in this capital who are

Mr. Ehrlichman said in an affidavit that President Nixon approved of the break-in at the office of Mr. Elisberg's psychlatrist after it had occurred and ordered the Justice Department to keep hands off the case.

Mr Ehrlichman said Mr. Nixon spoke about the break-in at the office of Dr. Lewis Fielding in Beverly Hills, Calif., on at least two occasions in Mr. Ehrlichman's presence.

Case Discussed

The first instance occurred on April 13, 1973, he said, when he heard Mr. Nixon discussing the case with Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen in a telephone call from Camp David. Mr. Ehrlichman said that the President said, in substance:

"You and your department stay out of that. That is strictly a national security matter. I know you have to enforce the laws but as President, I have to protect the national security and that comes first. As President, I am instructing you to take no action whatever on that mat-

Mr. Ehrlichman emphasized that the President had indicated "after-the-fact approval of this effort to secure evidence of Elisberg's motives and potential."

He also suggested that Mr. Kissinger knew more about the role of the White House "plumbers" unit, which carried out the burglary, and of one of the unit's members, former White House alde David Young, than Mr. Kissinger has said previously.

In a similar affidavit filed Monday, former presidential aide Charles Colson suggested that Mr. Kissinger had played a role in White House discussions that led to the formation of the "plumband might have known about the group's general opera-

House Committee Backs Bill for Oil Tax Reform

WASHINGTON, May 1 (AP). —The House Ways and Means Committee approved an oil tax reform bill Yesterday and also agreed on a long list of items for possible action as part of a general tax reform bill. The list did not include a personal income

Among the items were tax shelters, treatment of capital gams, tax simplification, depletion allowances for minerals and estate and gift taxes.

The oil tax bill, approved 14 to 5, is expected to hike the petroleum industry's taxes by $13 billion to $14 billion, if passed by Congress.

Under the measure, the oil depletion allowance would be phased out by 1979, while a temporary new excise tax would be imposed on windfall profits earned during the energy shortage.

Vice-President Ford said, after reading White House summaries of the transcripts, that "the President, in my opinion, is completely innocent." "Any fair appraisal of the documentation will show that he should be exonerated," Mr. Ford told reporters, adding: "It proves beyond a doubt that Mr. [John] Dean [former White House counsel] is telling less than the truth." In response to a question, he said that he has not yet read tha 1,300 pages of transcripts but that now that they're in the public domain, I intend to read them."

House Speaker Carl Albert, D., Okla., said that the Judiclary Committee should get just what it asked for -- the tapes, rather than the transcripts. "As a lawyer, I believe in the best evidence rule," he said. "Why substitute other evidence when the direct evidence is available?" House Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona said that the transcripts placed the President "in substantial compliance" with the subpoens. Sen. Barry Goldwater. R-Ariz., called the transcripts fair and equitable. What are we after here? Do we want the truth and the information contained in the tapes, or do we want some kind special privilege for the staff of the Judiciary Committee?"

The House Judiciary Committee's top-ranking Republican, Rep. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan said the transcripts, if they represent the complete record as claimed by the President, appear adequate.

Other Republican committee members supporting Rep. Hutchinson's opinion were Reps. Robert McClory of Illinois, Lawrence Hogan of Maryland and Delbert Latta of Ohio. Republican Reps. Tom Raiisback of Illinois, Hamilton Fish jr. of New York and William Cohen of Maine have contended that the transcripts are not adequate. Their opinion was shared by Democratic Rens. Robert Drinan of Massachusetts, Wayne Owens of Utah, Jerome Waldie and Don Edwards of California, and Charles Rangel of New York.

Pennsylvania and House Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona-are known to bave taken the position that Mr. Nixon's action will increase the likelihood that-if for no other reason-he will be impeached for failing to comply fully with the House subpoens. Several executive branch sour ces said that the President would not establish his innocence conclusively by releasing the full tapes and transcripts, and accordingly has fallen back to a selective release of material which is favorable. White House sources who zenerally voice uncertainty about Air. Nixon's guilt or innocence said recently that the White House strategy has centered on delay. an attempt to string out the impeachment inquiry, confuse the issues and buy time and perhaps additional public support. A White House official said Monday night that the President did not finally decide to release the transcripts until late Monday. The decision was up in the air all day ... it went right down to the wire," the official said, In preparing the transcripts, the sources said, Mr. Nixon him-

'Humiliation' Day For Congressmen

WASHINGTON, May 1 (UPI).

Congressmen gathered in small groups throughout Washington yesterday, taking part in an un-official national day of bumilia-tion, fasting end prayer.

In a church service, on the Senate floor, on the steps of the Capitol and in private meetings. they followed a Senate resolution setting aside yesterday to "repent of our national sins."

The resolution failed to reach the House floor, blocked by a mber's objections to unanimous consent resolutions. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who introduced the resolution, said it was modeled after a proclamation written by Abraham Lincoln, setting April 30, 1863, as a day "to confess our national sins and to pray for clemency and forgiveness."

The Nixon administration view at least as articulated by the last report of the Council of Economic Advisers, is that controls did not do much good. South African Girl Twice a Victim of Aparthei

Ruled 'Colored' And Then White

By Kenneth Whiting

JOHANNESBURG, May 1 (AP). -Sandra Laing is 18 and unmarried with two children, but that is the least of her problems in segregated South Africa. She has been a pawn on this country's apartheid chessboard for more than eight years.

Her parents are white. She was born in a hospital reserved for whites, registered at birth as white and baptized as white. But when she was 8, doubt about her ancestry developed and two years later she was officially reclassified as "Colored"-of mixed blood.

Her father, storekeeper Abraham Laing, recalled: "We were simply told out of the blue that ou, daughter, who had been born white into a white environment and culture and who knew no other life than that of a white, is e Colored." Until 1966 she attended a white school. Her parents say that about two years earlier they had heard whispers that some people objected to their daughter's white classification. The girl's appearance apparently persuaded many that a nonwhite person had been among ber ancestors.

On March 3, 1966, the parents received a letter from the principal of the girl's primary school at Piet Retief, near the Swaniland border and about 200 miles east of Johannesburg. It directed them to remove their daughter from school on orders of the provincial Education Department.

The parents declined and a week later the bewildered girl was brought home under police es-

The incident was brought no for discussion in Parliament elgbt years ago.

Mr. Laing appealed the "Colored" classification and the Department of the Interior reclassified his daughter as white in 1967. This was done under a law which automatically makes a child born of white parents white, after they submit affidavits that they were her natural parents. In 1969 Miss Laing met a black

WASHINGTON, May 1 (NYT). -Bacteria apparently frozen in the Antarctic lee and soil for at least 10.000 years have grown and reproduced in the laboratory, scientists have reported.

The bacteria were found in permanently frozen sediments at depths of several hundred feet below the surface. About four or five different bacterial types were found, some of which grew and reproduced when put in nutrient

The leader of the research team said that the discovery could have an important bearing on the prospects for finding life on such inhospitable planets as Mars.

He also said he knows of no previous authenticated discovery of bacteria even approaching the age of the Antarctic samples.

Surface Environment

In recent years, many scientists have speculated that Mars may once have had a surface environment much more hospitable to life than the dry and frigid desert believed to exist there now. If so, scientists have reasoned, life may have developed on the Martian surface and might still survive, frozen under the surface. The United Btates plans to send an unmanned Viking spacecraft in land on Mars in 1976 in a search for traces of life, but a key unanswered question has been whether living microbes could survive for cons

Eggplant, Turnips, Okra Spurned

WASHINGTON, May 1 (AP).—American children and their parents are in basic agreement on at least one thing: they don't. care much for eggplant, turnips or okra.

That was the finding of an Agriculture Department survey of 2,600 homes, in a document released Monday.

As Vegetables by Families in U.S.

Basically, the survey found that unless a vegetable tastes good, it won't be eaten. And it found that half the children surveyed did not like the taste of turnips, asparagus, brussels sprouts and egyplant. The "second most disliked vegetables" included beets, okra, squash, broccoll, and cauliflower.

Among parents, the losers were eggplant, okra and turnips. The big winners were corn and white potatoes, which were the favorites of three quarters of the parents and children. Tomatocs were preferred by about 80 percent of the parents and two-thirds of their offspring.

Asked to rate the importance of vegetables in meals, 64 ercent of those surveyed termed them "very important"-placing them second to meat, given the highest value by 78 percent.

Japan Moves To End Snag On Arms Ban

GENEVA, May 1 (AP).-Japan moved vesterday to break a longstanding deadlock in the Geneva disarmament talks over hanning chemical weapons.

It presented the 25-nation conference with a draft convention seeking to reconcile Western and Communist positions by proposing a two-stage approach to a prohibition and control system that avoids making international inspection obligatory.

In the initial phase, the Japanese draft would permit parties to the convention to exclude temporarily from the prohibition "certain chemical agents" still to be listed.

On the inspection issue, the key difficulty between East and West, the draft suggests that a state suspected of cheating should "make every effort to accept" international inspection, unless it provides "adequate reasons" why it cannot, Parties which remain unsatis-fled with the explanation given by a suspected state would have the right to withdraw from the convention. Japanese delegate Masahiro Nisibori said: "While disarmament has to be safeguarded by adequately effective verification measures, it is not realistic to expect 100 percent effectiveness from such measures."

The prohibition of chemical weapons is one of the two major Issues before the disarmament negotiators. The other is a comprehensive nuclear-test han, But both are deadlocked because of disagreement between the United States and the Soviet Union over verification

The United States demands onalte inspection; the Soviet Union says that such inspection would amount to espionage and that each nation should monitor itself and others through its own means of detection.

Commenting on the two-stage concept, Mr. Nisibori said: "Tolerating a certain number of exclusions [from the ban] is unavoidable under the present circumstances."

But he emphasized that Japan remains committed to seeking a comprehensive ban. A clause in the draft would pledge all parties to negotiate on eliminating the exceptions as "soon as pos-

We offer this fragment of a fragment only by way of illustrating a crucial point about the mother lode of materials which Mr.

Nixon bas invited the public to mine by way of demonstrating that he has now provided

"all the additional evidence needed to get Watergate behind us." The point is that even the transcripts edited personally by the President do not jihe not only with his public accounting of a year ago, but with his public account of the previous night. Indeed, this fascinating material does not even seem to bear out the White Honse summary which accompanied its release on Tuesday. To take just one important example, the summary insists that the President opposed a payment of cash money to Howard Hunt's attorneys which, it has been alleged by the Watergate grand jury, was made on the night of March 21. Far from opposing it, the President is shown in the transcript to have returned repeatedly and insistently and with a great deal of anxiety to the subject in his conversation with Mr. Dean, suggesting the necessity of getting that money out

So the point really is that the closer you get to the genuine evidence the more important it becomes to examine that evidence itself-not transcripts, not summaries, not versions of critical documents that have been edited and censored by the President.

Nelther the prosecotor nor the House Judiclary Committee, if either intends to do a fair and competent job. can afford to rely on incomplete "evidence" which would almost certainly be inadmissible in a court of law under the "best evidence" rule. We would leave aside the obvious fact, never mentioned by the President on Monday

one aspect - the Watergate burglary and cover-up-of a collection of crimes and improprieties that go under the general name of Watergate. For more important than that is the fact that the President persists in constituting himself the judge not only of what is to be considered an impeachable offense out of what material may properly be made available to these who are officially charged with investigating his conduct of office. We find it haro to understand how any self-respecting member of the Judiciary

Committee could be satisfied with the Pres-high risk for perfury situation.

There are almost as many Watergate an-Miversaries by now as there are saint's days. A year ago Tuesday, for example, the President rendered his first major statement to the American public on Watergate. In it he said, among other things, that on March 21, immediately upon receiving "new information" about the involvement of persons in his entourage, he had launched his own investigation, and:

. . . ordered that all persons in the government or at the re-election committee should cooperate fully with the FBI, the prosecution and the grand jury. I also ordered that anyone who refused to cooperate in telling the truth would be asked to resign from government service. . . . I directed that members of the White House staff Should appear and testify voluntarily under oath before the Senate [Watergate] committee... I was defermined that we should get to the oottom of the matter and that the truth should be fully brought out no matter who was involved."

In an odd commemoration of that statement, Mr. Nixon Tuesday released transcripts of tape recordings of actual White House conversations he was having at that time on this particular sobject—and they don't do a thing for the version of eventa quoted above. Here, for instance, are excerpts from the March 21, 1973, meeting among the President, John Dean 3d, and H. R. Haldeman:

President: . . . I think I want another grand jury proceeding and we will have the While House appear before them. Is that right, John?

Dean: Uh. Huh.

President: That is the point, sec, of course! That would make the difference. I want everybody in the White House called and that gives you a reason not to have to go before the Ervin and Baker [Watergate] committee. It puts it in an executive session, in a sense.

Haldeman: Right.

Dean: That's right. Haldeman: And there would be some night, that this material has to do with only Tules of evidence, aren't there? Dean: There are rules of evidence.

President: Rules of evidence, and you have lawyers.

Haideman: You are in a helluva lot better position than you are up there before the Ervin committee.

Dean: No. you can't have a lawyer before the grand jury.

President: Oh, no. That's right.

Haldeman: But you do hove rules of evidence. You can refuse to talk.

Dean: You con toke the Fifth Amendment.

President: That's right.

Intractable as it appears in itself, the Arab-Israeli conflict reaches its moments of most acute danger when it becomes an extension of Great Power rivalry in the Middle Conversely, any degree of superpower "understanding" in respect to peacemaking efforts between Arabs and Israelis brings a corresponding increase in the chance for an honest settlement.

Communiques and "informed sources" are often poor reflections of reality, but the outcome of Secretary Kissinger's meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko bolsters the growing hope that Moscow and Washington will not work at cross-purposes during the coming weeks of sensitive diplomacv.

Soviet isolation from Kissinger's dramalic mediation effort has proved to be a major tactical weakness in the negotiations, and is now recognized as such by the leading diplomats involved. Even in Israel, where auspiclon of Soviet intentions in the Middle East runs so high, it is acknowledged that without Soviet support and participation no arrangement with the Arab states-particularly Syria-can be relied upon, even if the deal could somehow be struck in the first

If Kissinger achieved any success in softening the Kremlin's opposition to his efforts. it must have been by convincing his Soviet counterpart that the American aim is not to seek great power advantage, that there would be room in a pacified Middle East for Fortunately, neither superpower seems to be trying to impose a peace plan this time. What Kissinger sought was just enough confidence in the integrity of his mediation to enable the Soviet leaders to soften the resistance they have expressed—and pressed upon their Syrian allies-as the real bargaining begins.

Clearly, Syrlan President Assad had been urged in recent weeks by his Soviet friends to strike a tough stance, to send his forces into action on Mount Hermoo, to maintain political and military pressure at a moment of evident weakness in the Israeli government. Now the key to success of the Syrian-Israell negotiations, through Kissinger's good offices, will be whether the Soviet Union feels satisfied that its interests will not oulfer from a peaceful resolution.

An American Proposal

The $4 billion, 10-point emergency program to assist countries hardest hit by price rises which the United States suddenly proposed at the United Nations on Tuesday seems intended to head off a rival $3 billion emergency aid fund proposal that was gaining support among developing countries. As the formulation of Secretary of State Kissinger's April 15th pledge of a major U.S. effort to help meet the development crisis. it offers concrete hope for action to close what Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has called the 'potentially disastrous gap' between the needs of those imperiled by steep price rises and the aid that is currently available.

The needs of the hillion people who lave economic disaster in the next 18 months can only be met by a scheme that can endist the support of those who must pay the bill-limit is, the United States and other developed countries, plus-particularly-the oil-emporing nations which have benefited most dramatically from recent price leaps. By pledging to shoulder its "fair share" of the cost, the United States has laid down a challenge that others - potential donors and beneficiaries alike-will find it impossible to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON-In the great crises of his political life, Richard Nixon has been almost recklessly bold. He saved himself from charges of corruption in presidential campaign of 1952 with his Checkers speech. He came back after losing the presidency in 1960 and the governorship of California in 1962, and the guess here is that he has helped himself by his latest TV defense against impeachment and conviction.

As in 1952, he appealed in his latest TV performance to the people over the heads of the politicians. His fate lies first. with the Judiciary Committee of the House, then with the opinion of the House itself, and finally, it he cannot persuade them, with the judgment of the Senate. But he dld not give the House Judiciary Committee the evidence it had subpostaned. He gave them that part of the evidence he thought they should have, and interpreted it selectively in his TV address to the nation before the Judiciary Committee had even had a chance to read the partial evidence he had provid-

More than that, he challenged the Congress to decide what facts they oeeded to carry out their constitutional responsibilities in the impeachment process, and even insisted on who should verify the evidence be had made

Tapes' Issue

For example, he insisted that his own lawyers should have the right to challenge any charges made against him in the impeachment proceedings of the House. but refused to allow the lawyers of the Judiciary Committee to listen to the tapes and check them against the selected transcripts be sent to Capitol Hill.

In short, he asked the people and the Congress to trust him, but refused to trust the Judiciary Committee or its lawyers to hear the tapes on which his argument was based. Also, he concentrated his attack on the testimony of John Dean, the main witness against him, though be must have known that Dean was forbidden by the courts to answer back.

All this was presented by the President to the nation as an exercise of unprecedented generority. No president in the history of the Republic, he said, bad ever made available to the Congress or the people so many secret conversations within the White House, which is true. No doubt, he added, these documents would be misconstrued by his opponents in the Congress and the press, but he had always sought to do what was right, and now all these thousands of documents would be published, and if anybody had any doubt, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Peter Rodino jr., of New Jersey, and the senior Republican member of the committee. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, could listen to the tapes and confirm whether or not he was telling the truth.

It is odd that such a speech should have to be made in Amerma by the President of the United States, and even tragic that he 1-it he had to cay, if you don't b here all this, you can check it against the record, but still this uses probably the most powerful and effective political speech Nixon has ever made.

Unlike his recent public speeches in Mus assippi, Texas, and Illinois, when he seemed to be elaborately cuthusiastic in his language and gestures. Nixon argued his case from the Oval Office of the White House with patient detail and calm. If he made any mistake, it was that he went on too long, cm he was composed and conteyed the impression that he knew preside what he was doing.

Seen from Capitol Hill it was a clever, almost an outrageous . peech. For if the Congress agreed with it, the House and the Senate would be saying that, even in an impeachment proceeding, the President should be able to select the evidence and the people who should check and confirm it.

Nevertheless, seen from the television screens, the President's main target, it was probably an -frective and even brilliant polital performance. Here is all the relevant evidence, he said to the t-levision audience. It will prove the farmess and innocence. Here beauted me are volumes of testimony. Officially this is said to equal $179, hut it doesn't; 135 rubles is, for example, the cost of a woman's sturdy overcoat with a fur collar. An experienced journalist nn Prayda, the leading Soviet newspaper, makes 350-450 rubles

Yet many Soviet citizens are convinced that they live better than residents of the capitalist countries. An old lady on a Mescow park bench heard from an American woman that her busband was on strike, and observed that this was perfectly nnderstandable—the busband was exploited and needed more money to live.

Another lady in the park observed that "We don't bave strikes for the time being."

By Western standards, Soviet workers stoically accept an unfair distribution of the nation's wealth. One set of statistics makes the point,

In the current five-year plan, which ends in 1975, these percentage increases are projected: industrial profits (which revert to the state): 90.4 percent; labor productivity: 38.8 percent; real income to the population (including welfare benefits): 30.8 percent; monthly industrial wages: 22.4 percent.

Official Soviet journals have reported that the cost of labor in Soviet industry has fallen from about one-third of total costs before World War II to less than one-sixth of total costs today. In other words, from a management point of view, labor costs have plummeted in the last 30

Similar statistics for any Western economy would show precisely the opposite trend. In many Western industries, labor represents more than half of total

The Soviet worker's standard of living is well below that of most Western European workers. It even compares unfavorably with his fellow Communists standard in much of Eastern Europe. Foreign experts and Russians themselves find it difficult to measure, what if any difficulties these comparisons create for the Soviet authorities.

No Protests

Many assume that the Russlan worker simply will not protest . ____ his situation—out of deci'ity, enthusiasm for the status quo. or whatever. There is support for this view in recent Soviet history, which includes no known examples of a real workers' protest. Workers in East Germany and Poland have been more volatile and demonstrative.

But studies published in official Soviet journals confirm the existence of dissatisfaction among workers. An article in Izvestia, the government newspaper, reported that in the big locomotive factory in Voroshilovgrad, dissatisfaction with wages was growing. Five years ago, Izvestia revealed, 54 percent of the factory's workers were dissatisfied with their pay. Last year two-thirds expressed dissatisfaction.

Dissatisfaction among journalists at The Washington Post was probably about that high earlier this month—resulting in a 17-day strike by the Newspaper Guild. There have been nn reports of a strike at the locomotive factory in Voroshilovgrad, however.

The bangs didn't come from Assad, who is by nature so cool he doesn't bave to keep it. No, the counterpoint was provided by Syrian and Israeli jets which started their argument near Mount Hermon and got so loud about their missile exchanges as they skidded overhead that the former air force general telephoned to inquire what the noise was all about.

L production of "Fidelio" currently on the boards at the Lyons Opera is a logical continuation of the lavish attention that the "new" regime here has given to the Viennese classics from Mozart to Berg-over the last five seasons.
This production certainly had DARIS (THT) -Mrs. Jacques Chaban-Delmas is the "tennis anyone?" type. She has a bouncy walk, a firm handshake and opens the door of her apartment herself.

Nothing stuffy about her. She wears a simple but chic Ungaro shirtwaist dress, her hair down, long and simple. She looks too young to be a grandmother.

Nothing stuffy about the apartment either. On top of a modern building, surrounded by a nice terrace, it is in the best House and Garden style-with bine slik walls, low-slung, modern furniture, and old Roman amphora, lots of paintings, books and elegant silver bric-a-brac, along with family pictures, Micheline Chaban-Delmas, 48, sits between flowers and a portrait of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Her first marriage ended in divorce. She is the presidential candidate's third wife. Mr. Chaban-Delmas and his first wife were divorced: his second died a few years ago.

The Chaban-Delmases have plenty to worry about Between the two of them, they have clent children, ranging from 15 to 30. How does she cope? "Children feel and understand everything. she said. "I have tried to be completely available and to tell them the truth. One must have an absolute respect for the family. But I can assure you that our children have adjusted very well. Her youngest son, Antoine, spends half the time with his father Mrs. Chaban-Delmas does not like to talk about the effect her divorce might have on her husband's campaign.

"It's a question of conscience and of heart," she said, in deliberately vague words "My husband and I have tried to seitle it with the maximum honesty."

The Chaban-Delmases, who have been married since 1971, offer an idyllic picture. They often held hands in public and held hands when posing for a photographer. "Yes," I'm very close to my husband," she said. "When a man comes home, he needs somebody to talk 10." Mrs. Chaban-Delmas always goes to the oirports to pick up her husband

WAVERLEY ROOT: How Napoleon 'Invented' the Sugar Beet

THE sugar best might be said to have been invented by Napoleon Bonaparte, at least in the French sense of the word. which refers to a discoverer as gan slowly when the German an inventor. But before Napoleon entered the picture, this. vegetable had already been produced by a triumph of guided evolution, though not as great a one as some enthusiastic writers have proclaimed it to be.

One widely read work describes it as unique, the only example in existence of the creation by man of a new species. The author of this description must have . forgotten maize, a creation of the American Indian; in any case the sugar beet is not a new species, but simply a greatly im-proved variety of the original common beet, Beta vulgaris. This fairly long tapering beet, with white flesh and nearly white skin, existed before its value as a sugar producer was discovered. and was used chiefly as animal fodder, though it was also eaten as a vegetable. The table best, however, was preferred for human ther consumption and still is, though the sugar beet, in its present in Faris now runs from the highly specialized evolved form, could also be eaten still, if anyone wanted to.

The rise of the sugar beet bechemist A. S. Marggraf discovered that sugar could be extracted from beets; but it was half a century before this evoked any great interest. A disciple of Marggraf's, Franz Karl Achard, set up a factory in 1796 to produce sugar from beets, but it quickly failed. Then the English blockaded France; the country was cut off from all sources of cane sugar. Napoleon had beard about the possibility of extracting sugar from beets, and, with characteristic energy and decisiveness; ordered that 70,000 acres be planted immediately with sigar beets. In 1812 a French financier named Benjamin Delessert opened a retinery for beet sugar in the Passy, section of Paris. He supplied Napoleon's palace with sugar, and ordinary consumers as well, with the result that Napoleon made him a baron of the empire. The Boulevard Delessert

Like most innovations, beet sugar was received with resis-tance. It was described as having an unpleasant taste, as being less sweet than cane sugar, and even as being downright unhealthy. Alexandre Dumas reported having seen a caricature of the little King of Rome, Napoleon's son, weeping as his nurse hands him a beet, saying, 'Suck this, child, your father says it's sugar." Then Jean Antoine Chaptal, professor of vegetable chemistry at Polytechnique (another Blustrious unknown; few Frenchmen could tell you why the process of adding sugar to wine is called chaptal-ization), demonstrated that beet sugar was chemically identical with cane sugar, and opposition to it decreased.

Chemical identity and gastronomic identity are not necessarily quite the same thing, and most gourmets, despite Chaptal, still nishes four-fifths of the vorld prefer cane sugar to beet sugar when both are equally available. Nevertheless the caricaturists awitched sides, and in 1840 Daumier depicted the funeral of cane sugar, conducted by an undertaker in the form of a sugarloaf of beet sugar. This many Americans didn't die in January and February, thanks to the 55mph speed limit.

This January and February, 1,880 people didn't get killed on U.S. highways compared with highway fatalities during the same months last year.

This January and February, 40,000 people didn't suffer disabling injuries in car accidents compared with the number hurt during the same months last year.

So say the statistics compiled by the National Safety Council.

Some of the lives were saved because motorists couldn't get enough gasoline and used their cars less. But, according to NSC, most of the lives were saved because, by and large, people observed the 55mph speed limit.

Nationally, fatalities decreased 25% in the two-month period. Traffic deaths in some states fell even more dramatically -46% in Maryland, 68% in Rhode Island, 74% in Utah-where lower speed limits began earlier or were more vigorously enforced.

Caution: these figures don't cover the weeks following the lifting of the Arab oil embargo, when drivers began to regain some of that old get-up-and-go spirit.

Will American motorists once again slaughter 55,600 people a year as they did in 1973?

We hope not. We hope the energy crisis taught us not just that the 55mph limit saves dollars and gasoline. But much, much more.

Japan Says Payments Hit Record Deficit

But End to Dip Seen As Reserves Increase

TOKYO, May 1 (Reuters).— Japan's believes of payments fell nearly $16.5 billion during the fiscal year 1973 which ended last March SI, the Finance Ministry said yesterday

But its external reserves showed another moderate increase this month, bringing hopes that the balance-of-payments slump might be coming to an end.

Banking sources said the crucial test would come in June, when Japan starts to pay its increased of import bill to cover the sharp rise in crude oil prices in December and January.

The balance of payments for the 1973 fiscal year ended March 31 produced a record deficit of $13.445 billion, compared with a surplus of $2.962 billion in the previous year.

However, Finance Ministry sources noted there was a continued narrowing in the nation's trade deficit attributable mainly to active exports—and a steady decline in capital exports....

The sources said moderate increases in Japan's external reserves—its holdings of gold and convertible currencies—during the past three months indicated that last year's balance-of-payments turnaround was coming to an end.

The foreign reserves stood at $12.713 billion yesterday an increase of $287 million over March. But this figure was still well below visible reserves of $16.834: billion held in April 1973.

The Pinance Ministry sources agreed that the increase in foreign reserves was partly due to the fact that the government was calling in dollars supplied earlier to Japanese banks to finance im-

They also said Japanese firms were being allowed to receive loans from foreign banks and issue bonds overseas under a new policy in force since last No-

Dow Chemical to Expand Drug Sector

Dow Chemical Co., of the United States, expects to considerably increase its interests in drugs and other secondary chemicals through its holding in Gruppo Lepetit SpA, of Milan, Italy, and its affiliates, Lepetit company officials report. The Dow life sciences division is in the process of transferring most of its offices to Milan under the auspices of the newly formed Dow-Petit group, Elio Poli Sandri, director of public relations for Gruppo Lepetit, said in an interview. With these statements, Lepetit hopes to lay to rest recurrent press reports in Italy that Dow Chemical plans to sell its 80 percent interest in Gruppo Lepetit, the parent concern for the inter-

But Insect Problem Remains to Be Solved

New Fiber Gives Hope to Paper Industry

The kenal, a 10-foot-tall plant that is a type of hibiscus, could be the answer to the U.S. paper industry's search for fiber sources. The kenal's main attribute is a fiber yield unsurpassed by any tree yet developed. It produces five to seven times more pulp per acre than the pine tree and grows to maturity in only 120 days, compared to 20 years for most trees. At a time when future wood fiber shortages are being projected these qualities make kensf increasingly attractive to the pulp and paper industry. The search for nonwood fibers stems from fact that trees do not grow fast enough. There are probably not enough trees to meet the nation's fiber needs much beyond the 1990s, some paper experts

Paper consumption, which is now 640 pounds per person per year, is expected to climb to more than 1,000 pounds per person per year by the year 2000, U.S. paper and paperboard production was 51.9 million tons last year, more than three million tone short of fit is also possible that trees could become uneconomical for papermaking in coming years, as demand for high-cost wood products takes priority," says C.E. MacDonald, International Paper Co.'s director of allied operations. This has already begun to ward-revised $80.02 billion in made into paper in order to con-February, when orders rose 12 serve more of the tree for panel-percent. ing, furniture and housing products. "Trees are too valuable to grow just for paper," Mr. Mac-Donald says

Though fiber shortages ara a new worry for the United States, many sparsely forested countries have always faced this problem. In Europe and Asia, millions of tons of paper are made from fibers like hamboo, reeds, rags, bagasse (sugar cane) and straw from wheat, rice, oats and barley. Papyrus, possibly the original paper fiber, is still being used in some countries.

The United States, too, has a number of varieties of nonwood fibers available. Some 70.8 million tons are produced each year, mostly as a byproduct of the harvest of other crops. But wood is much more economical for papermaking than these fibers, and only about one million tons of them are turned into paper Kenaf was selected after an investigation by the U.S. Agri-culture Department begun in 1957. The department, looking for a good cash crop for farmers, and recognizing the possibility of future fiber shortages, began tests to determine which plant would best fit the paper industry's requirements.

In the course of their investigation, the researchers tested some 6.00" seeds from 3,500 species of plants. Of this group, were rejected for a variety of reasons. Hemp had strong poten-tial, except that its cultivation is rigidly controlled to prevent the illegal use of its dried leaves as

In 1960, kenaf was selected as the best possible candidate—for its strength, harvesting potential, similarity to wood fiber and its pulping and mixing characteris-

But the widespread use of kenaf may still be a long way off, for the paper industry has not yet given up on trees. It is devoting huge amounts of time and money to a research effort designed to forestall the woodfiber shortage.

Kensi has some drawbacks that may slow its acceptance by paper manufacturers. Like many crops, it must be rotated every few years. Its seedlings rot when exposed to too much water and must be planted in raised beds. The plant would also require an entirely new system of land

The most troublesome problem that must be iroped out before kenaf paper becomes a reality is the root-knot nematode. This nearly microscopic worm burrows into the roots of the plant and saps its growth potential until it wilts. "Unless the bugs are out of about 850 were chosen for care-ful evaluation. Brazil Sets 10% Growth Rate But Inflation Level Unknown

(NYT) --- Brazil's new administration has fixed a goal for continued rapid economic growth hut has been unable to set a goal limiting inflation in the face of high oil prices

President Ernesto Geisel set the target for the increase in the nation's gross product as 10 percent this year. It has stood at more than 10 percent for the last four years.

Because of unpredictable conditions, however, no limit was put on the inflation rate, as has been done in the past. It was an-nounced that the President had approved Finance Minister Mario Simonsen's anti-inflation pro-

The program, announced Thursday night in Brasilia, included limiting the increase in the means of payment—cash and credit—this year to 35 percent. At the same time, companies buying products for prices higher than those fixed by the Inter-ministerial Price Council faced action under the national security laws. Moreover, it was recom-mended that state banks reduce the credit of companies selling products at higher than official

Inflation Rate Limit

Early last year, the administration of former President Emilio Medici set 12 percent as the inflation rate limit. However, unforeseen increases in imported crude oil prices and greater demand for Brazilian exports brought the inflation rate to more than 15 percent, Efforts to control inflation faced discouraging circumstances this year also. As it does every year, the government raised the minimum wage scale to compensate for the effect of inflation on the cruzero's buying power. The minimum was raised by 20 percent to $57.60 monthly, in Brazil's large centers—Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, However, most workers earn more because there is a labor shortage. Domestic air fares were ordered raised by 7.8 percent and interstate bus fares by 20 percent.

Brazil's trade deficit for the first three months of the year was estimated at more than $1 billion. It was attributed to the high cost of crude-oil imports and slow-moving exports. Coffee exports were reported lagging, with Central American coffees selling for lower prices. Soy-

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 1 reducing the trade deficit, were disappointing, with prices unexpectedly low.

The general price inflation rate for the first three months was estimated at 9,1 percent compared with 3,8 percent in the same period last year,

Because of Latin American complaints about U.S. protectionist measures, William Eberle, a special representative of President Nixon, arrived in Brasilia for conversations Thursday. However, no important results were expected. The Jornal do Brasil, a leading morning newspaper which often reflects official views, commented on "the haste" of Mr. Eberle's visit to Brazil and other South American countries, The newspaper said, "This shows a lack of sense for trade problems." It pointed to a decreasing im-portance of trade with the United States, while trade with Japan and the European Common Market has increased.

British Leyland Sees Upturn in Second Half

LONDON, May 1 (Reuters) .-British Leyland, Britain's biggest car manufecturer and exporter, today announced a half-year loss of £16.8 million.

The company was hard hit by the three-day work week imposed on industry because of the miners' dispute earlier this year. Steel shortages and industrial disputes also took their toll. But Leyland's chairmao. Lord were down both at bome and abroad, but the total value of exports at £218 million was higher than in any previous half-year in the corporation's bistory. Lord Stokes said it is becoming difficult to export because of the current recession throughout the European car market.

"The whole world motor industry is in for a fairly tough time," he told a press conference.

In his Statement to the Shareholders of National and Grindlays Bank Limited the Chairman, Lord Aldington, said:

The profits for 1973 were lower than in 1972 principally because of the effect on our London profits of the high level of interest rates. That they were as gnod as they were was due to the highly successful results in most of our overseas territories, a healthily improved position in international lending from London and good results both from many of Brandts activities and from our Confirming House, Gillespies. Taking the whole management team together they are stronger and better organised to corry on husiness internationally both at home and overseas and let me emphasise the importance for our future of the skilled international lending teams, which we have established in London. Brandts has been developed into a stronger merchant bank during 1973. The rest of the ed into a stronger merchant bank during 1913. The rest of the Group has shown itself ready for further decentralisation which is necessary both because of the increased size and area of operations, and in order to encourage initiative. That our management teams will equip themselves as well in 1974 I have no doubt. I cannot, however, be so confident about the conditions of finance and trade in the world, and at home. Nor can I say precisely how much of a hurden we shall continue to hear as a result of commitments entered into in previous years including the large gilt-edged portfolio of the Bank. But I can say that our international and overseas business has made a good start in 1974.

We now operate directly or by active participation with associates in 33 different countries overseas, having added to our network during 1973 Germany, Greece, Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines and Zaire.

In the Bank's traditional overseas territories in Asia

the results were up to expectations. Enquiries for foreign currency loans have been numerous in 1973. There have been some useful successer and the Bank has been able to show that we are not just "fair weather friends" of countries which we know well. The advantage to an international banker in London of having a well managed operation in the territory from which such an enquiry comes has been proved to us and to our customers.

Our business in Africa has shown useful progress. Kenya Commercial Bank has continued to expand and the special facilities provided by Grindlays Bank International (Kenya) have led to the growth of that Bank's business. Our subsidiary in Zambia-Grindlays Bank International (Zambia)has improved its efficiency very markedly. In the West of Africa our Associates in Nigeria and Ghana have coordinated to build up their husinesses in a sound and profitable way Our new subsidiary in Zaire - Banque Grindlay Internationale au Zaire - started its operations in November.

In Cyprus, Jordan, the Gulf and Oman results were definitely good.

In the Far East, the Dao Heng Bank continues to live up to our expectations. We are extending our activities in Hong Kong to include a wider range of banking services partly through Grindlays Dao Heng Finance Company Limited and partly through Brandts. In Japon we expect to start a full branch in Tol:yo lu Malaysia the Asian International Merchant Bankers Berhad, in which we are joined by Malaysian parmers and the Fuji Bank, opened for business in October, 1973. In Indonesia we have established a joint Representative Office with Bankhaus Ludwig in Jakarta.

In the Philippines we have acquired a 20% shareholding in Genbancor Development Corporation.

In Europe existing activities were strengthened in France and Switzerland, and new ventures were begun in Germany and Greece. In France the Banque Grindlay Ottomane (BGO) have begun to diversity as well as to strengthen their business. In Switzerland hoth the Geneva branch of the BGO and the separate operation of Grindlay Brandts had a good year. In Germany we have acquired just under 40% of the equity of Bankhaus Ludwig where our partners are Vereinsbank in Hamburg who hold the same percentage as we do, and the Kyowa Bank.

In Greece we have statted a branch in Athens, both to take advantage of our growing position in that part of the Mediterranean, and to fortify and expand the good relations which National and Grindlays and Brandts have with a number of important Greek customers.

Gillespies had a satisfactory year and improved their profit before tax by 30% to £560,000. Gillespies are planning to expand their hase of operations into the Far East in the near future.

On the travel side, Cox & Kings are now the official tour operator for Air Ludio for tours to India from the I laired the near future.

On the travel side, Cox & Kings are now the official tour operator for Air India for tours to India from the United Kingdom, and other new travel facilities are being developed.

Brandts is now a merchant bank of considerable size with activities reaching out beyond Europe to other continents of the world. It's Balance Sheet discloses a capital and nents of the world. It's Balance Sheet discloses a capital and reserve position of £20.5 million and a strong banking business. The very special position which has been built up in shipping finance has been further exploited in 1973. They have also developed a good sterling banking business in London. A number of international lending syndicates have been organised and Brandts have a special position with Iran.

The Corporate Finance Department has had a busy and successful year. The Industrial Department has done much good work which inevitably is not reflected in good results under present conditions but which will reap imprenant later.

This is the last time I shall be writing an annual statement of National and Grindlays Bank Ltd. The name will change on the 1st January, 1975 to Grindleys Bank Ltd.

ANNA PAVLOVA

By Oleg Kerensky. E.P. Dutton & Co. 160 pp. $6.95.

RACE horses have been named is 2 pity Mr. Kerensky does not after Vaslay Nijinsky and Joe Namath, and a meringue dessert has been named after Anna Pavlova. Like Nijinsky, with whom she danced early in her career. Paviova was one of the first pop stars of the century.

No better symbol exists of ballet's ability for mass appeal (were you taught that ballet was an entertainment for the élite?) than this epitome of the Russian ballerina. Although she lived from 1881 to 1931, before the television age, her name was known to mil-Interest in hallet is again reach-

Between 1910 and her death, her company covered 350,000 miles across Europe, Latin America, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, Egypt, India, China, Japan, Java, Singapore and on several national tours in the United States.

The Pavlova company and Serge Diaghilev's Ballets Russes were rivals, often playing against each other, as in New York and Buenos Aires. The traditional view is that Diagbilev was the revolutionary and modernist in ballet, while Pavlova was the conservative, relying upon Versions of the 19th-century classics or new vehicles for herself, whose romanticism summed up the past rather than looked ahead, Mr. Kerensky, a British ballet critic who also happens to be the grandson of Alexander Kerensky, head of Russia's provisional government in 1917, does not drastically alter this image. He points out correctly that the public came to see Pavlova and not the ballet.

Yet hindsight now makes clear that Pavlova's devotioo to classicism (as exemplified in her production of "The Sleeping Beauty," the first staged outside Russia: foreshadowed Diaghilev's own return to classicism and attraction to neoclassicism-as represented by his company's last ballet master, George Balanchine. As Mr. Kerensky notes, a public that demanded the old favorites frequently kept Pavlova from innovating too fiercely, but she was definitely interested in certain experiments. Many of her ideas now bave a contemporary ring: A ballet without music (Hello, "Moves" by Jerome Robbins); a fusion of ballet and Indian classical dance (Greetings, "Bakhti" by Maurice Bejart); a mixture of acrobatics and ballet (Hail, "Moszkowski Waltz" and all the other Bolshol Ballet "Highlights" duets).

But perhaps it was at her so-called sentimental that Pavlova was most modern. Her famed solos, beginning with "The Dying Swan," and short divertissements were not autobiographical, but they were expressions of an "inner emotion" new to bailet and were extensions of her personality. Because Pavlova'e vocabulary was grounded in classic ballet, the fact that her personal expression was as strong as that found in what became known as modern dance has been over-

An individualist—the very reason she formed her own company rather than remain with the Russian Imperial Theaters or Diaghilev—Pavlova left her stamp on every ballet she touched. It

In this category are the state-meots that Pavlova was the itlegitimate daughter of Lazar Poliakoff, a member of a Jewish hanking family; that the Poliakoffs and the dancer Ida Rubinstein were descendants of a Georgian dancing sect; that Pavlova may have agreed to do intelligence work in Germany for the czarist government; that, in Mr. Kerensky's words, "I have been told... she preferred some form of oral sex. Pavlova's parentage has always been treated as a mystery. In his hiography of Nijinsky, Richard Buckle stated flatly that her mother was a 'Jewish laundres:' in St. Petersburg. Given the fact that the only Jews allowed to live outside the pale of settlement by the czarist government were professionals and businessmeo, the chances of a member of the Jewish proletariat, a laundress, living in the then Russian capital, are highly unlikely. Mr. Kerensky's belief in the Pollakoff version, on the other hand, rests merely on a remark made to an emigre friend

Equally suspect is the idea that the Poliakoffs and Ida Rubinstein came from a dancing sect, and the spy story merely makes good

Mr. Kerensky's unattributed speculations on Pavlova's sex life smack of the Ken Russellism that mars this otherwise readable and useful book. The theme of Mr. Russell's filmed biographies of Tchaikovsky, Isadora Duncao and other artists has been the gap he sees between their creative achievement and their supposedly less noble personal life w Mr. Kerensky does not always force the pattern but this teodency, ostensibly meant to illuminate an artist's life and work but actually leading us astray, is there. Here is one of the author's verdicts:

"Pavlova's strong ambition to be a great ballerina may well have been the result of desire to overcome the disadvantages of iflegitimate birth and of childhood poverty. Her enthusiasm and empathy for the more sentimental and romantic types of ballet werd probably a symptom of sexual nonfulfillment." Rubbish.

On the diagramed deal West took full advantage of an incau-tious opponent, who took his partnership from the frying pan into the fire, North opened with a weak two-hid in spades. West balanced with a double, which his partner was happy to pass for penalties. This contract should fail by two tricks for a penalty of 500-bad for North-South, but not disastrous, sinc. East-West can make 600 in three no-trump if they reach that contract and judge the play accurately.

However, South decided for no good reason that he could do better in some other suit at the three-level. He tried an SOS redouble, demanding that North pick another suit, and East-West were happy to keep doubling. Eventually, South found himself in three diamonds doubled.

The defense began with two high clubs and a club ruff. East shifted to a heart, and South's king was taken by the ace. West shifted to a trump, siming to stop heart ruffs, and East took the ace, Another trump would have left South with just six tricks. but he was given a chance to dig his grave even deeper when East returned the spade queen, South took his two spade win-

East won and played a high spade which South ruffed with the dismond king in order to ruff his last heart. This was a hollow victory, because the position was now this:

England Ousts Ramsey

LONDON, May 1.—Sir Alf Ramsey's 11-year reign at the top of English football ended abruptly today with a Football Association statement that it has fired him

PA officiels later made it clear that the man who won a knighthood piloting Engisnd lo lhe World Cup victory in 1966 bul saw it eliminated this year had nol cone voluntarily. The PA said the decision was taken in the light of England's "future policy in respect of the promotion of international footbalt." It said a special subcommittee was set up in February to study the "Ramsey question."

Joe Mercer, general manager of the First Division Coventry City squad, was named as caretaker manager until s permsnent one could be found. Ted Croker. FA secretary, said the position would be "advertised nationally."

I'll tell you something cise. I'd hate to see this year's Derby split. They're saying they have so many horses they may have to run it in two divisions. If they did, 1 don't think you could talk about the Derby like you talk about it now. Splitting it would cheapen it. If it's the most prestigious race, it should have the most prestigious horses. Too many owners just want to see their colors in the Derby. Bring a party to the race. Get free passes. One year, they were talking about entering a horse who'd never been schooled out of a etarting gate. It's ridiculous. It always seems the horses who don't belong are the ones that get in the way, jeopardize the whole race. And there are so many that don't belong. Some of them aren't even good allowance horses, much less stakes horses. This isn't my department, but I'd say. raise the entry fee to $20,000 if that's what it takes to keep the field to 20 or maybe 22 starters. I don't think they could have a soreening committee to tell n man, "Whos, you can't run your horse." I know Mrs. Tweedy [Penny Tweedy, in whose Meadow Stable colors Secretariat and Riva Ridge competed? wouldn't send a horse into the Derby unless she thought he had a chance to win. I was ready to ride Capital Asset for her in this year's Derby, but the horse hasn't done what we had hoped so he won't be going to Kentucky. I'm trying to line up another Derby mount now, but he'd have to be a horse with a chance.

dsy. Sure, there's pressure. But it's a kind of holding-your-breath thing. Will the horse get hurt in a workout? Will he react badly to the growd on Derby day? All those people and all that noise. After all, he'e only a

You try to analyze the race. What horse will be there in front? Which horses will be taking back? You study post positions and past performances, and you hope you and the trainer see eye to eye on strategy. He hires you. You hope he says, "Ride your

That's what Lucien Laurin the Meadow Stable trainer, told me with Secretariat and Riva Ridge. "Play it by ear," he said. "See what happens.

You can feel the tension when you go out in the post parade and warm up. Then you're in the gate. Everything gets quiet. You grah a fingerful of mane, try to keep your horse alert, on his feet. You try not to let him go to sleep. If he stops paying stienion, you pick his head up, shake the blt in his mouth.

You're looking down a big long tunnel to that first turn. Like e trench with two big banks of people on either side. Then it's every man for himself. You hear noise from both sides of the track, and I think that helps keep the horses straight. It sort of balances things.

I've been in four Derblee now, and I've felt the tension every time except the first. That was 1965, when I was third with Tom Rolfe. It's funny, but I think I was overprepared emotionally for that one. They kept telling me you get a feeling out of this world when you take your horse onto the track, your spine gets chills, that kind of thing.

But the first time, I was calm. It didn't dawn on me until two weeks later that I'd actually ridden in the Kentucky Derby. The second time, 1966, when I was sixth on Rehabilitate. That's when I really heard the last two years, when they put that blanket of ros es on your horse, well . . . what can I say? Riva Ridge wes in front all the way. When lead and set a fast pace. So I just let him come out of the gate and go to the front and gallop along on the lead. No problem. Led All the Way

Mr. Laurin put slit-blinkers on him the morning of the Derby, so if he was in the lead and tended to loaf, he could see another horse coming to him and he'd go on.
With Secretariat, I just tried to let him relax in the Derby. We were last for awhile in s 13-horse field because I knew he'd pick up up whenever I asked him to. The only thing about him, it was still in the back of our minds, could the Bold Rulers go a mile and a quarter? I thought he could but I didn't want to use his speed too early. So I let him rclax.

People were knocking me after Secretariat got beat in the Wood Memorial before the Derhy, but I didn't let that bother me. I'm used to criticism. Every jock has to be able to take criticism. And I know I didn't misjudge the pace in the Wood, like they said. No way. Most of your knockers don't know what they're talking about. They never ask the jock what happened. If I make a mistake, I'll say so.

Every Kentucky Derby Is an Event —But This Year's Is the 100th

OUISVILLE, Ky. (IHT).— Some Kentucky Derbies are more important than otherslast year's had record-breaking Crowds, record-breaking bets and record-breaking Secretariat, and this year's Derby on May 4 will be the 100th to be run-but in Kentucky you'd better believe that every single Derhy is an event if not to make the world shake, at least to make it tremble visibly. As Irvin S. Cobb, the syndicated sage of Paducah, Ky., once observed:

"Until you go to Kentucky and with your own eyes behold the Derby, you ain't vever been nowheres and you ain't never seen nothin'!"

The one-and-a-quarter mile classic for three-year-olds may not in fact be the world's greatest horserace, but it would most gracious of cities where every Derby tradition is cherished and maintained. The charming little Kentucky Derby Museum tucked behind the famous twin spires of Churchili Downs race course not only has souvenirs of past winners and the brightly colored silk purses local belies made for the prize money ithe purses were hung at the finish line to be grabbed by the winning jockey), but it also offers souvenir julep glasses and a brochure with the words of "My Old Kentucky Home" and a description of how Mrs. Kingsley Walker has since 1931 made the winning horse's blanket of roses ("using green buttonhole thread she sews each

"Never," Mrs. Walker declares. "has a single rose fallen off be-fore being put on the horse!"

The Centennial Derby is to a degree a vational event (the United States has issued a 10cent commemorative stamp showing a field of 10 horses in an apparent dead heat), but it is mostly a Kentucky fete. The Courier-Journal, which ran an ill-tempered Derby Day tion's most prominent celebra-tion of avarice has its 99th renewal at Churchill Downs today"), has become feverish enough to publish, for the traditional Derby breakfast, a recipe for Bourbon Hot Dogs ("if the liquid evaporates too much, add more bourbon").

Other special events include hicycle, balloon and, possibly, great steamboat races, and the erection in Riverfront Plaza of the world's largest sundae, 8 feet high, with 230 gallons of ice cream, flavor unspecified, Ken-tucky colonels and their ladies are having a banquet and a barbecue, a department store is advertising Thoroughbred Fashions in sizes 12 1/2 to 24 1/2, and a Louisville Times reporter excitedly announces that this year's Derby Queen will sport a brand new red velvet robe instead of having to wear the Mardi Gras robes Derby Queens have worn for the past 13 years. The winner of the Centenary Derby will get a gold cup worth three times the usual trophy (the price of gold has gone np. also this year's cup is encrusted with diamonds and emeralds. The 75th Derby Cup had diamonds only). Another trophy will be presented at this year's Derby by the star guest, Princess Margaret, who will at-

band Lord Snowdon. The Snowdons will be staying in the former slave quarters of C.V. Whitney's fine estate and will meet a limited number of gentry, but a local paper has offered question and answer advice on how the common reader should react in case he runs into the princess:

Q. What is a proper topic of conversation? A. She will initiate the talk

One of the more durable features of this year's centenary Peter Chew's excellent new book, "The Kentucky Derby: The First Hundred Years" (Houghton Miffin), an historic account from the early days when flamboyant Col. Matt Winn promoted a local race into one of America's best-known sporting events to the career of Secretariat who, even before his three-year-old debut, had been syndicated for a price ($345 an ounce) greater than the cost of gold.

The Derby has been won by 91 colts, seven geldings and one filly (Regret, in 1915). Fifty-two of the first 61 winners carried the blood of Lexington, a descendant of Diomed, the winner of the first Epsom Derby in England. Seventy-six winners were foaled in Kentucky and only three were not foaled in the United States.

Eddie Arcaro rode five winners, Ben A. Jones trained six winners, and Calumet Farms sent out a record-breaking eight winners starting with Whirlaway (as Red Smith wrote, "Calumet laid it over the competition like ice cream over spinach").

In the first Derby there was only one white jockey out of 15, and black jockeys won 15 out of the first 28 Derbles. Jimmy Winkfield, the black jockey who won twice and finally retired to France where he died at 91 in March, thought that black jockeys were eased out once the profession became profitable. A trainer attributes the change to the difficulty in finding small enough blacks

The Derby has apparently long been reputed for its roughness, and even worse were the brutal owners who ran their winners past breaking point at other races to cash in on their Derby reputation. Then there was the 1968 scandal over Dancer's Image, a disqualified winner, though Red Smith has pointed out, doping was an old habit: "Sir Barton, America's first triple crown winner who took the Derby in 1919, is celebrated as one of the great hopheads of history..."

The great Man O' War never ran in the Derhy, but some very queer specimens have. Weeks before the race the size of the field is always enormous to be thoroughbred must merely be registered with the Jockey Club -and one of the queerest entries ever was One Eyed Tom, in 1972, who had never run in a race or been schooled for a starting gate this owner was finally pressured into scratching him). There are some who think the Derby should be made an

The Kentucky Derby was founded by Col, M. Lewis

Clark, jr., and on the morning of the first race the Courier-Journal predicted that Derby Day would be "a long series" of annual turf festivities which we confidently expect our grandchildren 100 years bence to celebrate in glorious continuous rejoicings..." So glorious are the rejoicings and so continuous will they be, that the State of Kentucky has also decided to celebrate an important birthday, its 200th, this year. In fact Kentucky did not become a state until 1792 hut, as a member of the Bicentennial committee told reporter Billy Reed, "In 1976 the 13 Eastern seaboard states are going to get all the publicity and everything, so frankly we just wanted to get our share ahead of them." Kentucky will of course celebrate the nation's bicentennial in 1976 and will recelebrate its own statehood in 1992. In the meantime the bicentennial committee will prolong the Derby's centennial festivities with a summer-long program of activities. So happy birthday, whoever it is.

Smuzgling charges against one of Ugandan President Idi Amin's ex-wives were dropped Tuesday during a court hearing in Tororo. The prosecution withdrew the charge, according to Radio Uganda after Amin's former wife, Mama Malyamu, pleaded guilty to acting as a traveling wholesaler without the necessary license. She and two men were fined 800 shillings (about $100). Another two men who pleaded not guilty will be tried on May 20. All five had been arrested early last month at a customs post on the Uganda-Kenya border and all denied the smuggling charge—attempting to export five bolts of textiles packed in a manner likely to deceive customs officials.
